Artist Live-Work Studios for Ownership: Funding and Possibilities

Recently, ArtSpace-Cleveland has received financial support from the Ohio Arts Council and the city of Cleveland's Neighborhood Equity Fund to study opportunities for artist live-work ownership. After two unsuccessful attempts in 2005 to acquire a building to convert to artist live-work ownership, we are confident that all the stars are in-line and reality is within our grasp.

Funding from these two agencies is a confirmation that ASC can fulfill its mission, to acquire a building or storefront to convert to artist live-work ownership. ArtSpace-Cleveland is working in collaboration with the St. Clair Superior Development Corporation.

4th Annual Trolley Tour of Artist Live/Work Spaces Registration - Marina Marquez-Zenkov and Erin Aleman.

Why the Superior Avenue Corridor from East 18th to East 40th Street is attractive for artists to live and work

An important need for artists is to identify with a gathering place where their works can be seen, music heard, galleries flourish, coffee houses and restaurants to meet and eat, exchange ideas, pass on news and of course – be affordable. These qualities are available in the Superior Avenue Corridor. The City Artists at Work Open Studio Tours over the last few years has acted as a great network organization where over 50 artists in 11 buildings from East 18th to East 40th Street open their studios to the public. This area has been re-zoned for live-work artist studios with the new overlay ordinance and parking incentives for conversions of factory space to work spaces.

Cleveland participates in the national movement, to attract people to the city to bring new talent and new job opportunities to the community through the arts. Continuing support from the city of Cleveland, from non-profit organizations, from corporations and from the media help us reach our goal to match artists with spaces.

By Harriet Gould

Jennifer Omitz, a 2002 graduate of the Cleveland Institute of Art, left Cleveland for 'greener' pastures in the Denver area and returned to Cleveland May 2006 because of an illness in the family. ArtSpace-Cleveland helped Jen find an affordable, safe and exciting studio space in the Hamilton Building at East 54th & Hamilton.

Jen's impression of Cleveland is that it is a town hungry for change. She sees Cleveland as a hub for artists; the rent is cheap and the city is nurturing for creative people. Jen has a show titled HYPNOTICA at the e. gordon gallery in Little Italy. Her website (homepage.mac.com/jenthepainter/) highlights her work which explores the boundaries between painting and photography.
